Federal Supplemental Security Income:

Q - I'm taking my grandparents to apply for SSI payments. I know it will take a while for their application to be processed. The problem is, they need money now to pay some bills. Can they get an advance payments?

A. If a claimant appears to meet all the eligibility requirements and is in need of immediate cash assistance to meet a financial emergency before the first regular SSI check arrive, the social security office may issue an emergency advance payment. The amount of the advance payment will be withheld from the first regular SSI check. The advance payment may have to be repaid if the claimant is found ineligible.

Q. I've been told that the maximum amount of resources a person can have and still be eligible for SSI is $1,500. Are there any exceptions to this rule? My assets total slightly more than that.

A. Not all resources are counted in determining a person's eligibility for SSI. But if a person's countable resources exceed the limit by a small amount, the person may still qualify for SSI payments if he or she agrees to dispose of the excess within a specified time. Time limits for disposal are 6 months for real property and 3 months for personal property. SSI payments received pending a sale of the assets may have to be repaid out of the proceeds of the sale. For more information, contact a social security office.

Q. I have an aunt who is severely handeicapped. I think she's probably quality for SSI payments. Who would decide if she's disabled, the social security office?

A. When a decision concerning the claimant's disability is necessary, it is made by the State disability determination service. The social security office will develop all non-medical proofs and any evidence relating to disability is sent to the State. If a claimant is currently receiving social security disability benefits, the social security office can immediately authorize SSI payments without referral to the State for further medical review providing other eligibility requirements are met.

Q. My husband and I have been receiving SSI payments for about 2 years. We're in the process of getting a divorce. Should we notify social security?

A. Yes. You should notify social security promptly if your marriage ends or if you separate for 6 months or more. A change in your marital status could affect the amount of payments due you and your husband. If you want information in advance as to how this could affect your payments, get in touch with any social security office.
